ROYAL HAW. AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Arrangements for the Coming Exhibitions.

The management of the R. H. A. Society's fair has been confided to committees composed of members of the board of management, with, in the case of the stock show, the assistance of Judge Bickerton. These committees met, the one on Monday, and the other on Tuesday evening. The members of the stock show committee are Judge McCully, Mr. Chas. Lucas, Mr. B. F. Dillingham, Mr. J. S. Webb and Judge Bickerton. They came to the conclusion, after a lengthy discussion, that if a place for the show could be found within a moderate distance from the centre of the town it would be preferable to the Society's establishment at Kapiolani Park. Mr. Dillingham was appointed a committee of one to ascertain if Mr. G. N. Wilcox and Hon. H. M. Whitney would consent to the use of the well-known premises on King street, and, although another meeting of the committee to receive his report has not yet occurred, we are in a position to say that he has succeeded in obtaining a site which is expected to answer all purposes. The preliminary programme of the show will shortly be published, and an earnest appeal will be made to all raisers of stock of any description in the islands to contribute to the fair.

The committee having charge of the horticultural show, consisting of Hon. A. S. Cleghorn, Dr. McKibbin, Mr. A. Jaeger, Mr. J. S. Webb and Mr. W. M. Giffard, had a meeting on Tuesday evening, at which the general programme of the show was decided upon. The mistakes of former years, of dividing the exhibits into too many classes, will be avoided. First, second, and third prizes will be given for the best variety of exhibits, and also for the best special exhibits in certain classes, of which the following have been determined upon, subject to modifications as circumstances may direct:—Roses, ferns, shrubs and flowering plants, palms, orchids, fruits, vegetables, sugar cane, cereals and fodder plants, bouquets and floral designs.

The show is to be held during the second week of May, in the Society's hall on the Government Nursery grounds on King street.

The Diffusion Process.

"What do you think of that diffusion process quest?" queried the HERALD reporter of a scientific and practical expert in sugar manufacturing.

"Oh, that's all fudge; it's all rot," was the prompt reply.

"You see," he added, "the claim is that the test gave an increase of fifty per cent for diffusion over the results from crushing. Now, there is only eighty-eight per cent of juice in sugar cane, and we get over eighty per cent from the crushing process. Where, then, does the extra fifty per cent come from?"

"Probably," remarked the reporter, "the test was made under the most favorable conditions possible, so that the results, whatever they were, would be better than those obtained by the process in practical sugar making."

"That is so; but, anyway, diffusion is the great hobby of Wiley, the Government chemist, and we cannot go by his tests alone, after having adopted double crushing with expensive plant."

"You are not prepared to throw away all your big crushing mills for the diffusion process?"

"Well, we are ready to adopt the very best process that is invented, even at the cost of discarding the present expensive machinery, but are not satisfied as yet that the diffusion process is worth such a sacrifice."

The interviewed being busy, the interviewer, satisfied with the above information, withdrew.

THE ESCAPED CONVICT.

Yesterday the Deputy Marshal, Mr. D. Dayton, issued posters, with photographs of Chun Hook affixed, offering $50 reward for the recapture of the desperado.

Up till midnight no clue to the escaped convict's whereabouts had been reported at the Police Station. Apparently every available officer was out on the search, for the Station was deserted of all but the keeper.

It is not thought by the Deputy Marshal that Chun Hook is being harbored by any of his countrymen, as he has always been avoided and hated by the Chinese generally. Chinamen say that in China a character like that would have his head cut off by any Government luna finding him, without the formality of bringing him before a court of justice. They say the law here is very light.

While Chun Hook is at large there is an uncomfortable feeling among all classes of the community. It is generally hoped, however, that the rascal cannot remain long in hiding; but the police will keep a sharp lookout that he does not try a treacherous game on any of them trying to catch him.

A Chapter of Misfortune.

Mr. William Miller, cabinet maker, has experienced a chapter of misfortune recently, which must procure him the sympathy of the whole community. First, his house was robbed of a large amount of the savings from his well-known industry, together with other valuables belonging to his wife and himself. Next he sustained severe injuries by a fall during the wet spell, at his residence, Seaview. It is ascertained that two or three of his ribs were broken on that occasion. Yesterday more trouble came upon Mr. Miller, in the loss of a valuable horse, that had got at a bin of bran and foundered itself. It would be more pleasing to see the old proverb, "Misfortunes never come singly," knocked out of time than to have it verified in a succession of mishaps to so worthy a member of the community. However, proverbial fate ought to be satisfied with three strokes like the above mentioned, even on the broad shoulders of Mr. Miller.

Burglary.

The Club House Dining Rooms, King street, were entered from the rear by a cool and skillful burglar, between Tuesday night and Wednesday morning. The cash till was broken open, but no money had been left in it at closing time. Officer Hopkins heard a noise within when passing the place about two o'clock on Wednesday morning, and he rattled the front door but found it locked fast. A HERALD compositor also imagined he heard a noise there when going home a little later. The policeman named also found a chair on Alakea street, which Mr. Cavenagh, proprietor of the restaurant, last evening identified at the Station as his property, and the only thing he missed.

What England Does for Egypt.

An important and interesting White Book has just been issued containing the German Foreign Office correspondence respecting the affairs of Egypt in 1886 up to June last. The information is valuable, especially when people are beginning to be anxious to know a little about what has been going on in Egypt for the past six months. By far the most vital point to be considered is what good the natives of Egypt have derived and do derive from British occupation. The answer is given by a memorandum of conversations with two native gentlemen, one of good standing, whose opinions are much respected by those who know him; the other a country squire, who owns an estate not far from Cairo. The evidence of these persons comes to this: Since the days of the Caliph Omar Egypt has never seen such security as that enjoyed by the masses. They are no longer exposed to arbitrary taxation, mulct and intimidation by those in authority. A peasant does not now live in constant dread of arrest and exile simply because he is well-to-do and has excited the envy or cupidity of some official or court favorite. Personal security for the ordinary Egyptian is now at last a historical fact, and not a matter of opinion. The people hardly believe their senses in this respect, and only fear that the present state of affairs is too good to last. There is less robbery and brigandage now than there was twelve years ago. A cadi or native judge is quoted as giving an opinion that Egyptian peasants nowadays suffer less ill treatment and enjoy more freedom and security of person than has ever before been known. The more intelligent of the population have begun to appreciate those advantages, and the expression of their opinions at the present moment may no doubt be attributed to a dread of an eventual relapse into the old system of administration.

The monthly meeting of the Myrtle Boat Club, appointed for to-morrow, is postponed until Friday evening of next week.

Royal Marriages.

The news that the Crown Prince of Italy has been betrothed to the second daughter of the German Crown Prince is considered a most remarkable departure from the traditions, royal and religious, of the House of Savoy, which now, for the first time in its history, forms a matrimonial alliance with a Protestant. Catholics and Protestants are, through these alliances, coming closer together every day.

The other Royal marriage, said to be arranged between Prince Albert Victor and the daughter of a German Grand Duke, is a mere invention of the poetic journalist. It is perfectly well known that the Prince of Wales bears a strong antipathy to some of his German kindred by marriage, and the very last intention he cherishes respecting his son is to bestow him on the daughter of a fifth-rate German princeling. It so happens that the father of the fair bride—she is very fair—selected by the irresponsible chattering for Prince Victor, takes his title from the tiny territory of which Lever and Thackeray made such luscious fun. His Highness of Pumpernickel-Schwipesengellern used to be often too hard up to pay his army of one Field Marshal, three Generals, six Colonels, one private and a drummer; whereas his descendant, the reigning Duke, is very decently well off. The Queen took a great liking to the young lady, who is amiable, accomplished and beautiful. The theory is that some of the court spies, like Lady Stradbrooks of Yates celebrity, who supply paragraphs to the society papers at $10 a paragraph, being aware of the Queen's liking, evolved out of it a fiction which is said to have given great annoyance to the Prince and Princess. —N. The Waialua Road.

A man just back from Waialua says the roads between there and Honolulu were never better than at present. "They are the finest roads ever known in the country," he said. "If the people want to speed horses, there is a splendid track beyond the gulch, as level and smooth as a billiard table. And I never saw the cattle look so fat. They are just rolling, the grass being heavy and green." A gang of road repairers was met this side of Ewa.
